

MANAGING CONSTRUCTION STORMWATER REGULATIONS

Executive Summary

Managing Construction Stormwater Regulations, a benchmarking study recently conducted by the Retail Industry Leaders Association (RILA), finds that while less than half of the companies participating maintain a corporate construction stormwater program, all conduct third-party stormwater assessments of construction sites.

This survey is intended to evaluate how retailers in general are managing the challenges of construction stormwater compliance.

RSI member retail companies were invited to participate in this survey over the course of two weeks in October/November, 2009. Eight companies participated, representing more than $500 billion in annual sales.

The full results of RILA member benchmarking studies are only available to participating companies. The findings are based on a survey of RILA's Retail Sustainability Initiative (RSI) members in November 2009.
